Community Meeting for Community Leaders Interested in the Future of Cable TV in Rye

On January 19th at 3:00PM a meeting of community leaders will be held in the Community Room in the Rye Library. This is the first in a series of smaller meetings which are part of a community needs assessment process. Information derived from this meetings will be used in the franchise negotiation process with both Cablevision and Verizon.

Do you have any interest in helping to shape the future of Rye's communications infrastructure? While many people in community organizations and local government have been invited specifically, the general public is welcome to join in the process. The only requirement is that you have an interest in cable TV in Rye. If you are not interested, please spread the word to anyone who you think might be like to take part in this process. The process works best when a broad spectrum of the community is represented.

The meeting will be conducted by The Buske Group, a consulting group that assists municipalities around the country in the franchise negotiating process.

Tax-deductible donations to support local access TV may be sent to:

New Year's Resolutions

If you have ever made a New Year's resolution to be a better communicator, RCTV might be an easy and fun way to fulfill that resolution. RCTV is full of opportunities to get involved in the community. Whether you are interested in working on an existing program or would like to produce your own, RCTV has a spot for you. Or if you are not interested in program production there is also the community bulletin board to hone your graphics skills, or other assorted volunteer positions to be filled. Volunteer work can provide community service hours for high school students and self-fulfillment for adults.

If you are interested in any involvement at all with RCTV call the RTVC production coordinator, Nicole Levitsky at 967-9106 or the Cable TV Coordinator, Jim Kenny at 967-7242.
